They've achieved these honors in a city without competition-quality training facilities.

Just think what our kids could do if they had a pool of their own.

The Riverside Aquatics Complex will boost the local economy

Not only do our aquatics athletes leave home, so do dollars generated by aquatics competitions. A comparable facility built in 2004 in Davis, California hosts 45 events, water polo association and NCAA tournaments. The four year economic benefit has been more than $39 million. A conservative estimate for Riverside is $1.8 million per year for 10 events.

Riverside is the home of aquatics champions

Give our kids a chance to reach for their dreams. Make sure they can train and compete close to home.

Help us build them a pool of their own

Build the Dream — the Riverside Aquatics Complex

*"It's a dream.
I can't believe it's going to happen.
I wish it was here when I trained."*

Tuesday Middaugh
Olympian, Synchronized Swimming, 4th place Duet (2000), 5th place Team (2000), Former Riverside AQuette

The Riverside Aquatics Complex will meet the needs of Riverside's swim, dive, and water polo athletes for generations to come and bring almost 6,000 more pool hours to all of Riverside youth.

65-meter pool • 1-, 3-, 5-, and 7-meter diving boards
10-meter dive tower • Grandstands and Scoreboard

Pools in Riverside are in short supply

And even though Riverside's home pools aren't large or deep enough for competitions, they still host thousands of young swimmers just starting out as aquatic athletes. These pools are crowded and don't meet the community's needs. The new Riverside Aquatics Complex will host events now located at community pools and make almost 6,000 more hours available to all of Riverside's young people. In addition, RCC's Community Swim Program can expand. Every summer more than 2,200 young swimmers use RCC's pools. A new Riverside Aquatics Complex will mean more kids get a chance to swim.

There's no place at home

Riverside and Riverside Community College produce champions but the RCC pools are 55 years old and too short and too shallow for today's competitions.

Three, four, five times a week, our young athletes face a grueling commute after school to pools in Los Angeles, Fullerton and Mission Viejo to train and compete.

They have no choice. Many collegiate and Olympic hopefuls must give up their dreams every year because their families cannot afford the time and expense of twelve to twenty hours on the road every week. Keep them home and open up aquatic sports to hundreds more kids every year.

"What a great opportunity to have a world class aquatics training and competition site in Riverside. I achieved my dream of winning an Olympic medal, but I had to log a lot of travel time to and from training facilities. The Riverside Aquatics Complex will be incredible."

Stephanie Nesbitt
*Bronze medalist,
Synchronized Swimming (2004)
Former Riverside AQuette*
